Well-Being and Higher Education: A Strategy for Change and the Realization of Education’s Greater Purposes

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements
Donald W. Harward, President Emeritus, Bates College; Director, Bringing Theory to Practice

Preface
Sally Engelhard Pingree, President, S. Engelhard Center; Co-founder, Bringing Theory to Practice

Foreword
Julie J. Kidd, President, The Endeavor Foundation

Introduction
Donald W. Harward, President Emeritus, Bates College; Director, Bringing Theory to Practice

Section A: Analysis and Meaning

Essays
1. John Bronsteen, Professor of Law, Loyola University Chicago: “Measuring and Improving the Effect of Higher Education on Subjective Well-Being”
2. Carol Ryff, Professor and Director, University of Wisconsin Madison, Institute on Aging: "Eudaimonic Well-being and Education: Probing the Connections"
3. Barry Schwartz, Dorwin P. Cartwright Professor of Social Theory and Social Action, Swarthmore College: “Higher Education and Education in Virtue”
4. Henry Giroux, Chair for Scholarship in the Public Interest, McMaster University: “Higher Education, the Struggle for Democracy, and the Possibility of Classroom Grace”

Provocations
5. William Sullivan, Senior Scholar at the Center for Inquiry in the Liberal Arts at Wabash College: “Against the Culture of Acquiescence: Why Students Need Liberal Learning for their own Well-Being as well as the Well-Being of Society”
6. Kazi Joshua, Associate Dean for Intercultural Affairs and Chief Diversity Officer, Whitman College: “Is Well-Being an Individual Matter?”
7. Elizabeth Minnich, Senior Scholar, AAC&U; former Dean, Barnard College & Columbia University: “Understanding the Complexities of Well-Being”
8. Jerzy Axer, Professor of Classics and Director of Artes Liberales, University of Warsaw, Poland: “The University as the Common Enemy of Opposing Views of Well-Being”
9. Todd Gitlin, Professor of Journalism and Sociology, Chair of Communications, Columbia University: “Education for Well-Being”
10. Alexander Astin, Carter Professor of Higher Education Emeritus, University of California: “Why Well-being is Fundamental to Liberal Learning”

Section B: Manifestation and Implementation

Essays
11. Corey Keyes, Winship Distinguished Research Professor, Emory University: “Why Flourishing?”
13. Sara Dahill-Brown, Department of Political Science, Wake Forest University, and Eranda Jayawickreme, Department of Psychology, Wake Forest University: “What Constitutes Indices of Well-Being Among College Students?”
14. Laurie Schreiner, Chair and Professor, Department of Higher Education, Azusa Pacific University: “Thriving: Expanding the Goal of Higher Education”
15. Tricia Seifert, Associate Professor, Adult & Higher Education at Montana State University: “Well-Being and Student Persistence: Reframing Student Success”
16. Andrew Seligsohn, President, Campus Compact: “What Does Doing Good Mean? Well-Being and the Civic Purpose of Higher Education”

Provocations
17. Elsa Nunez, President, Eastern Connecticut State University: “Student Well-Being as a Function of Identity Development”
18. Thia Wolf, Director of First Year Experience Program, California State, Chico, and Amalia Rodas, California State University, Chico: “Student Narratives and Well-Being”
19. Brian Murphy, President, De Anza College: “Well-Being and Agency: Political Education in a Time of Crisis”

Section C: Facilitation: Curricular, Pedagogic and Across Boundaries

Essays
21. Nance Lucas, Executive Director of the Center for the Advancement of Well-Being, and Paul Rogers, Associate Professor of English, Associate Chair of the English department, and Senior Scholar at the Center for the Advancement of Well-Being, George Mason University: “The Well-Being University”
22. Heidi Elmendorf, Associate Professor of Biology and Director of Undergraduate Studies in Biology, and Joan Riley, Associate Professor, School of Nursing & Health Studies, and Senior Scholar, Center for New Designs in Learning and Scholarship, Georgetown University: “Curricular Infusion of Well-Being and Science”
23. James Pawelski, Director of Education and Senior Scholar, Positive Psychology Center, Adjunct Associate Professor, School of Arts and Sciences at the University of Pennsylvania: “Connecting the Eudaimonic in the Humanities and the Science of Positive Psychology”

24. David Schoem, Director, Michigan Community Scholars Program; Adjunct Associate Professor of Sociology, University of Michigan: “Honoring the Humanity of Our Students”

Provocations

25. Jonathan Metzl, Professor of Sociology and Psychiatry, Director, Center for Medicine Health and Society, Vanderbilt University: “Well-Being and Being Safe: Do Guns Change Social Interactions? A Missouri Case Study”

26. Amanda Hyberger, QEP Director and Associate Professor, Chattanooga State Community College: “Well-Being and the Community College Mission”

28. Theodore Long, President Emeritus, Elizabethtown College: “Mobilizing Campus Communities for Well-Being”

29. Kevin Kruger, President, National Association of Student Personnel Administrators (NASPA), and Stephanie Gordon, Vice President for Professional Development, NASPA: “Why Institutional Commitment to Well-Being Bridges the Academic and Student Affairs Divide”

30. Robert H. Frank, Professor of Economics, Cornell University: “Distilling Career Advice from the Happiness Literature”

Section D: The Logic of Change: Why, What, and How?

Essays

32. Peter Leyden, Founder and CEO, Reinventors: “Reinventing Higher Education for the 21st Century”

33. Carol G. Schneider, President, AAC&U: “Transforming Learning: The LEAP Challenge and the Well-Being of Students”

Provocations

34. Randall Bass, Vice Provost for Education and Professor of English, Georgetown University: “Well-being, Disintegration and the Re-bundling of Higher Education”

35. Donald W. Harward, President Emeritus, Bates College; Director, Bringing Theory to Practice: “The Greater Purposes Initiative: A Collaborative Agenda”